

Choreutika

Performing and Theorizing Dance in Ancient Greece

edited by Laura Gianvittorio

Contributors

Sophie Marianne Bocksberger is departmental lecturer and tutor at Somerville College, Oxford. She is a professional dancer, and the co-leader of Ancient Dance in Modern Dancers, a practice-based research project on ancient Roman pantomime. She is currently preparing a monograph on the figure of Telamonian Ajax in archaic and classical Greece.

Eric Csapo is Professor of Classics at the University of Sydney. He has published widely on Greek literature and culture, especially ancient drama and theatre history. In collaboration with Peter Wilson he is preparing a multi-volume history of the Classical Greek theatre to be published by Cambridge University Press.

Patrick J. Finglass is Professor of Greek and Head of the School of Humanities at the University of Nottingham, and a Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford. His editions of Stesichorus (2014), of Pindar's Pythian Eleven (2007), and of Sophocles' Electra (2007), Ajax (2011), and Oedipus the King (2017) are published by Cambridge University Press.

Laura Gianvittorio is research fellow of the Austrian Science Fund (FWF) and Post-Doc in Classics at the University of Vienna, where she runs the project Aeschylus' Diegetic Drama. Over the past decade, she has been working at Italian, Austrian, and German universities, publishing on Pre-Socratic philosophy and on Greek drama.

Stefan Hagel is classical scholar at the Austrian Academy of Sciences, with focus on ancient Greek music and metre, including reconstructions of instruments and performance techniques. His most prominent publication is Ancient Greek Music. A New Technical History (CUP). He also creates scholarly software; his Classical Text Editor received the European Academic Software Award.

Frederick G. Naerebout is lecturer at the Department of Ancient History at Leiden University. He has published widely on ancient religion and on culture contact in the Hellenistic and Roman world, and is an editor of the distinguished series 'Religions in the Graeco-Roman World'. Dance in Antiquity, and its reception, has been his special interest for many years.

Anastasia-Erasmia Peponi is Professor of Classics at Stanford University. She writes on issues of aesthetic perception and judgment, ancient and modern lyric poetry, Plato, dance, and the relationship between the verbal and the visual. Among her publications are Frontiers of Pleasure: Models of Aesthetic Response in Archaic and Classical Greek Thought (Oxford University Press, 2012) and (ed.) Performance and Culture in Plato's Laws (Cambridge University Press, 2013).

Eleonora Rocconi is Associate Professor of Ancient Greek Language and Literature at the University of Pavia (Italy). She is charter member of MOISA. International Society for the Study of Ancient Greek Music and its Cultural Heritage, and member of the editorial board of Greek and Roman Musical Studies. Her research interests focus on ancient Greek music and drama.